Description

This set of six mid-century sterling silver wine gobles emulate all the classic design motifs and characteristics of Stuart Devlin's mid-century designs of the 1960s and 1970s, but were in fact made by Richard Lawrence Geere who did design for Stuart Devlin during that period.

These silver white wine goblets are characterised by their modernist design, featuring a hand hammered finish to the silver bowls and textured and stylised bark finish on the gilded stems. The bowl interiors are gilded and they will not impart any taste on the contents.

Blending modern aesthetics with traditional craftsmanship in this distinctive mid-century style, these goblets are very desirable and showcase the silversmith's skills in a combination of simple forms and technical innovation.
