Description

This pair of antique, three-light, silver-plated candelabra is a recreation of a George III style pattern made famous by Matthew Boulton circa 1805.

The candelabra are very versatile. The two candlesticks can be used independently by taking a removable nozzle from a branch and placing it on the candlestick. The removable branches can be slotted, one above the other, to make a single five-light centrepiece. The central flame snuffers are also removable, as are the wax drips; all meaning they are easy to clean.

Fitted with 12" (300mm) candles, this fine pair of candelabra are an excellent height to light the table without the flames becoming a distraction.
