Description

This is a fine late-19th-century antique silver-mounted glass wine jug in the form of a classical Greek flagon. The body is hand-blown glass, cut with a decorative starburst in the base, while the collar, hinged cover and raised handle are all sterling silver.

The word claret is common parlance for red wines from Bordeaux that gained popularity in Britain over centuries. The word comes from the French clairet (meaning bright or light-coloured) and a the shape and clarity of this jugs glass will show off the colour and clarify of your wine to perfection.

Capacity of the jug is a capacious 1300ml (44 fl oz); almost two standard bottles of your favourite red wine.
