Description

Altough made in 1851, this is a distinctly Georgian style silver pint mug with all the classic characteristics of the era: bellied form, sitting on a stepped base and with a strong handle featuring an acanthus leaf-topped handle and thumbpiece.

Given as a presentation piece, rather fittingly, by the Worshipful Company of Coopers in London, this silver mug bears the following inscription:

Presented to Charles Jeffries Church
By the Coopers of London
as a testimony of his integrity
during the late trial for CONSPIRACY
Anno Domini 1851

This mug weighs 12 troy oz (367g).
